Proposed law targets 311 call 'harassment'

Help. The bill would limit anonymous and baseless 311 complaints against properties.

One of the first complaints against Scott McGrath's property last year came six months after Superstorm Sandy nearly destroyed his New Dorp Beach home on Staten Island.

Entered on April 28, 2013, the complaint cited excessive debris at McGrath's Roma Avenue house, according to Department of Building records.

"We were still cleaning up after Sandy," McGrath, 46, said nearly a year later. "And we get a phantom call about garbage on my property? Come on."

An inspector later ruled that the complaint was unwarranted, but McGrath's property has continued to be cited for numerous unsubstantiated buildings violations, from construction without a permit to illegal conversion. McGrath said he believes a neighbor who once threatened him is using 311, the city's non-emergency call service, as a tool for harassment.

"We keep getting these anonymous calls," said McGrath, who lives with his wife. "We're going insane."

Councilman Steven Matteo said McGrath is not alone. Since 2006, when Matteo became chief of staff to his predecessor, current Staten Island Borough President Jimmy Oddo, his district office has recorded over 50 cases of residents like McGrath who are being subjected to 311 "harassment."

"It gets to the point where it's ruining some people's lives," Matteo said.

A City Council bill introduced by Matteo last month aims to end such "neighbor-versus-neighbor" 311 disputes.

Deidre and Scott McGrath say that they have been harassed with 311 complaints by a disgruntled neighbor. / MILES DIXON, METRO

New bill

The law proposed by Matteo aims to curb 311 "harassment."

- Under the bill, properties would be ruled the subject of "harassment" after receiving three or more baseless and anonymous 311 complaints within six months.

- The property would then be off-limits to anonymous non-emergency complaints.
- The law would apply to any property occupants who are the subject of repeat anonymous 311 calls, be it homeowners, renters or leasers.

- Though McGrath has struggled with building calls, the law would pertain to other 311 complaints, like noise or mold.

sponsors, a property like McGrath's would be ruled the subject of harassment upon receiving three or more baseless 311 complaints within six months. For three months after that, the 311 customer service center would only document non-emergency calls about the property without referring them to a city agency.

The law would apply to any property occupants who are the subject of repeat anonymous 311 calls, be it homeowners, renters or leasers, according to Matteo's office.

Matteo's bill, he said, wouldn't limit "legitimate" calls to 311, which is used to report everything from relentless dog barking to potholes.

If complaints against McGrath's home continue at the same rate under the new law, his property would be considered harassed.

Five buildings complaints against his home were logged on April 28 and 29 last year alone, according to city records. Including the call about debris, four were deemed unsubstantiated after an inspection. Just one — a complaint about electrical wiring — warranted a notice of deficiency because of Sandy damage.

His property received nine total complaints in 2013 and two more this year.

McGrath said part of the hassle is that he must be home for inspections, which are often during work hours. Matteo said that the calls can also waste resources.

"It clogs up the system," he said.

A spokeswoman said it is the policy of 311 not to comment on proposed legislation.

McGrath said he hopes the bill, if passed, will eventually stop the complaints and ease his family's Sandy recovery. He said several others in the neighborhood also hit hard by the storm have been fielding similar 311 complaints.

"People are trying to get their lives back together," he said. "They shouldn't be harassed — that's the bottom line."

Firm has bright vision for the grimy LaGuardia

Makeover. The new renderings paint a rosy picture of what the hub could look like.

New York's LaGuardia Airport has long suffered a bad reputation, but one Manhattan design firm put out a new vision for the national hub.

Renderings from Neoscape show a bright, curvy, modern structure that would service something like the 26 million passengers who used LaGuardia in 2013.

The drawings were created for the Global

Gateway Alliance, an airport modernization advocacy group.

The New York Post reported that the 1.3-million-square-foot structure is one-third larger than the existing building and leaves space for a direct subway line.

At least three bids remain for LaGuardia's main terminal redesign estimated to cost $2.5 billion, according to Crain's New York Business.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo has called for the state to take control of LaGuardia and John F. Kennedy airports.

Sting nabs JFK cab dispatchers on bribe charges

Taxi. Dispatchers would move those who paid to the front of the line.

Sixteen airport taxi dispatchers were arrested and charged with allegedly receiving unlawful bribes after an undercover operation found some drivers paid to cut the line for passengers.

After receiving a tip December 2012, investigators found dispatchers would receive cash payments as low as $10 in exchange for skipping the lines to go pick up passengers at John F. Kennedy Airport's terminals.

On average, taxis hang out in the holding area for two to three hours.

The dispatchers cut that wait time down significantly for any driver who would pony up.

While the cash amounts were low, busy days and thousands of cabs could result in hundreds of dollars in one shift, said Queens District Attorney Richard Brown in a statement.

Rikers Island inmate 'baked to death' in cell

A city inmate was "baked to death" in an overheated jail cell at Rikers Island last month, according to a report.

Officials told the Associated Press that the body of Jerome

Murdough, 56, was found dead in a cell that overheated to at least 100 degrees, likely because of malfunctioning equipment.

The former Marine was found in a cell in the unit around 2:30 a.m. on Feb. 15. The temperature of the cell and his internal temperature were at least 100 degrees, according to the AP.

"He basically baked to death," one of the officials said.

An autopsy was inconclusive, but officials told the AP that the medication Murdough was on could have made him more vulnerable to heat. He also didn't open a vent in his cell. ANNA SANDERS

New poll says majority of New Yorkers want to keep horse carriages

Mayor Bill de Blasio's opposition to horse-drawn carriages in Central Park has few fans in a new poll that was released Wednesday.

A new Quinnipiac University poll shows that 64 percent of New York City voters do not want to see the mayor ban the controversial carriages. The feeling is shared by a majority in each demographic, Democrat or Republican, man or woman.

In fact, the number of those defending the carriage industry saw an increase, up from the 61 percent that was measured in January.

The poll also asked voters whether they preferred de Blasio or Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to fund prekindergarten.

Only 35 percent of those polled supported de Blasio's plan. Fifty-four percent would rather use Cuomo's plan. CHESTER JESUS SORIA

The United States warned Moscow on Wednesday that it was on a "dark path" to isolation after Russian troops backed by unarmed volunteers stormed Ukraine's naval headquarters in the Crimean port of Sevastopol and raised their flag.

Ill at ease. Half of Americans buy into theories about medical cabals.

About half of American adults believe in at least one medical conspiracy theory, according to new survey results. But some theories have more traction than others.

For example, three times as many people believe U.S. regulators prevent people from getting natural cures as believe that a U.S. spy agency infected a large number of African Americans with the human immunodeficiency virus.

J. Eric Oliver, the study's lead author from University of Chicago, said people may believe in conspiracy theories because they're easier to understand than complex information.

"Science in general — medicine in particular — is complicated and cognitively challenging, because you have to carry around a lot of uncertain-

Understanding the reluctant

Overall, the researchers say people who believed in conspiracies were more likely to use alternative medicine and to avoid traditional medicine. Oliver said the findings may have implications for doctors.

- Instead of viewing patients who believe in conspiracy theories as crazy, he said doctors should realize those patients may be less likely to follow a prescription regimen.

- "It's important to increase information about health and science to the public," he said. "I think scientific thinking is not a very intuitive way to see the world. For people who don't have a lot of education, it's relatively easy to reject the scientific way of thinking about things."

"To talk about epidemiology and probability theories is difficult to understand as opposed to, 'If you put this substance in your body, it's going to be bad.'"

For the new study, he and his colleague used data from 1,351 adults who answered an online survey between August and September 2013. The data were then weighted to represent the U.S. population.

The participants read six popular medical conspiracy theories and then indicated whether they had heard of them and whether they agreed or disagreed with them.

Do you 'like' how I look?

Social media that emphasizes sharing and commenting on photos and other images may feed the anxieties of young women with eating

In experiments with a group of female college students, those who logged into their Facebook accounts were more likely to worry about their weight and body shape afterward, compared to women who read online articles about a neutral topic.

For those working on treatment and prevention of eating disorders, the effects of spending time on Facebook may be a factor

Fed may have to keep rates low after economy finds footing

The Federal Reserve on Wednesday pushed forward with plans to slowly wind down its stimulus but said it will likely need to keep rates low even after the economy regains its health.

In announcing its view on future rates after a policy meeting, the Fed also dropped a set of guideposts it was using to help the public anticipate when it would finally start bumping overnight borrowing costs up from zero. REUTERS

In US contraception case, a question of corporate rights

Provision. The cases were brought by owners who want an exemption from the "contraception mandate."

The U.S. Supreme Court could dodge the contentious question of whether corporations have religious rights when it weighs objections to an Obamacare requirement that employers provide insurance coverage for contraception.

The court, which hears oral argument in two consolidated cases on March 25, could rule that individuals who own closely held companies, rather than the corporations themselves, can argue their religious rights have been violated. Such a ruling would allow the court to avoid criticism that it favors corporate rights too much.

The latest challenge to part of President Barack Obama's 2010 health care overhaul is one of the most closely watched cases before the nine justices this year, mixing religion, women's rights and politics.

The justices will weigh whether the companies or their owners have a claim under a 1993 federal law called the Religious Freedom Restoration Act and the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which ensures the free exercise of religion.

Religious institutions are exempt from the regulation.

One option for the justices is to adopt the approach a federal appeals court in Washington took in one of dozens of cases being litigated around the country and rule owners have a right to object, ignoring the question of whether companies can.

"It does kind of give a middle way to duck the legally controversial question," said Francis Manion, a lawyer for Roman Catholic brothers Francis and Philip Gilardi in the case decided by the Washington, D.C., court. The brothers own Freshway Foods and Freshway Logistics in Sidney, Ohio, and object to providing insurance that covers all federally approved contraceptives. REUTERS

In June 2012, the justices upheld by a 5-4 vote the constitutionality of Obamacare's core feature that requires people to get health insurance. This issue is the first Obamacare case the court has taken since then.

Lindsay Lohan's sex list ... continued

Everyone! Important news! More names on Lindsay Lohan's sex list have been revealed! And yes, you will want to know who they are.

Earlier in the month, I told you about In Touch's "world exclusive" report, in which the mag somehow got hold of Lohan's handwritten conquest list. Heath Ledger, Adam Levine, Zac Efron, Justin Timberlake, Joaquin Phoenix, Colin Farrell, Evan Peters, Wilmer Valderrama, and Jamie Dornan all made the cut, for better or worse. However, some of the names were blanked out for what everyone assumed were legal reasons — but now we know it was just a clever way for In Touch to drag the story out for as long as possible.

Back in October 2006 — did they, or didn't they?
WIREIMAGE

The new round of names include Ashton Kutcher, Orlando Bloom, Benicio Del Toro, Ryan Phillippe, rugby player Danny Cipriani, NHL player Aaron Voros and director Josh Mond. So, there you go.

Everyone famous who Lindsay Lohan has had sex with. The only person missing from the list is Danny DeVito. And at this point, he probably wasn't on the list because she couldn't figure out how to spell "DeVito."

Talking points

M.I.A.'s huge NFL fine

Rapper M.I.A.'s feud with the NFL isn't going away, as the sports league has apparently been after her for two years to pay a $1.5 million fine for flipping the bird during the 2012 halftime show, according to the Hollywood Reporter. On top of that, the NFL is apparently looking for an additional $15.1 million in "restitution" because of how much exposure the stunt garnered M.I.A. The NFL maintains that her stunt was a "flagrant disregard for the values that form the cornerstone of the NFL brand and the Super Bowl," a charge her legal team finds laughable. "The claim for restitution lacks any basis in law, fact or logic," her rep says. "The continued pursuit of this proceeding is transparently an exercise by the NFL intended to bully and make an example of [M.I.A.] for daring to challenge the NFL." The rapper at least has a sense of humor about it, asking fellow halftime performer Madonna if she can borrow $16 million in a tweet that was later deleted.

Career day with Charlie Sheen

Career day at school is a lot more interesting when one of the parents speaking is Charlie Sheen. The former "Two and a Half Men" star did just that recently at the elementary school that his daughters Sam, 10, and Lola, 8, attend, according to Radar Online. "At the last minute, Charlie decided he wanted to go," a source says. "He arrived in the morning and gave a talk to both classes that his daughters were in. It was funny, and Charlie answered questions from the kids about being a television star. The talk lasted about 10 minutes and then he was gone." Also in attendance was Sheen's ex-wife, Denise Richards, but the two "didn't exchange any words, as she sat on the opposite side of the room," the source adds. "Thankfully, Charlie didn't bring his porn star fiancée, Brett Rossi, along. Imagine that career advice!"

"Vikings" airs Thursdays at 10 p.m. on HISTORY. / GETTY IMAGES

You might know Canadian actor Alexander Ludwig as Cato, the brutish Career tribute in "The Hunger Games." Now he's taking on another tough-guy role, that of bold and bestial Bjorn, son of young warrior Ragnar, in season two of HISTORY's "Vikings."

Were you nervous about joining an already established cast?

Yeah, it's always a little ness. Bjorn was a very powerful Viking and he was able to command a lot of attention at a young age. I think a lot of that has to come from the fact that he was very sincere and he rarely smiled — when he did it really meant something. Everything he did had a purpose and in that way he was also a very intellectual and loving person. I wanted to keep that depth intimidating when you're joining a cast that's been around, but they welcomed [me] with open arms and we got along super well.

Did you know much about Vikings before joining the show?

No, and I think that's why "Vikings" is doing so well — it is a part of history that not a lot of people know about, so there's very little to go off of. I think the reason people are loving "Vikings" too is whenever they hear about these bad people who raided and did all this raping and pillaging and whatnot, but when you see it from their perspective it's definitely an interesting story. This family were real people and they went on to do unbelievable things. They really laid the foundation upon which our world was built.

What are the challenges of playing someone who's so long gone?

I think there's a lot more freedom just because it was so long ago. There's very little for me to go off of. The only pressure really came from the fact that the character's already been established in the first season, so I took it upon myself to really ensure that there were certain fundamentals that I wanted to stay consistent with my character, like [his] depth and earnest-

Nude Norseman

Let's talk about your costumes — or maybe, in your case, your lack thereof.

For the most part I am clothed. [Laughs] It's unbelievable what they've done with the costumes and I give a lot of props to the costume department. They've gone above and beyond and researched exactly what [the characters] would look like back then, and a lot of the material they make it out of is how they actually made their costumes back then. It really just makes it so much easier as an actor; you don't have to pretend to be a Viking at all. The sets are so exceptional and the clothing is so real you already feel you're in it.

to him, but also, four years have gone by since you last saw him and a lot can change, so I wanted also to show that maturity to him now.

Who would win in a fight between Bjorn and Cato?
Bjorn would win. He's just so vicious.

Something new

One of "The Double"'s two Jesse Eisenbergs takes Mia Wasikowska on an awkward date. / DEAN ROGERS

Cinema. The annual New Directors/New Films series boasts an art house "Death Wish" and two Jesse Eisenbergs.

Not all of the directors in MoMA and the Lincoln Center's annual New Directors/New Films series are new; a few are on their second, even third film. But they're all at least still new at their jobs, and the series, as ever, captures exciting, promising and even already great artists when they're still wet behind the ears.

You can go online to see our reviews of six of the 27 features (and plenty of shorts) available this go-around. That would include "The Double," actor-filmmaker Richard Ayoade's follow-up to the dry teen romance "Submarine." His new one performs a Kafkaesque twist on Dostoevsky's novella, with meek clerk Jesse Eisenberg meeting a more confident and jerkish Jesse Eisenberg.

The beautifully named (and beautiful) "The Strange Color of Your Body's Tears" is another loving and abstract homage to the '70s Italian giallo genre from the directors of "Amer." The Chilean drama "To Kill a Man" reimagines "Death Wish" as a long take-heavy art house mesmerizer, with a bullied schlemiel awkwardly taking the law into his own hands.

Meanwhile, Ben Russell and Ben Rivers are not newbies; they're established avant-garde titans.

But a film made by both — namely "A Spell to Ward Off the Darkness" — is practically by a new, two-headed filmmaker. Their contemplative joint effort prowls three different ways of living: from a commune to a remote island to, of all places, a death metal concert. Here's your chance to let it envelope you on the big screen.

4 minutes with four Brooklyn designers

Style. We catch up with four rising stars at Brooklyn Fashion Week, including a pet couturier!

Collection: G.Leon

Alicia Pickney

Age & Hometown: 23, Philadelphia.

How she got her start: Pickney attended Philadelphia University for fashion design but started sewing when she was 13. Before becoming a designer, she taught people how to start their own businesses, which mixed well with what she was trying to do in the fashion industry. The emerging entrepreneur is now one of the youngest to premiere at Brooklyn Fashion Week and says she couldn't have done it without the support of her close friends and family.

Favorite piece: "My patterned trench coat with leather accents and my overalls are my favorite."

Favorite fall trend: "My go-to trends in the fall are neutrals and socks. I love layering — whether I dress up an outfit or dress it down, I either wear the thigh-highs or layered socks."

JENNIFER VALDEZ @metronewyork
letters@metro.us

Collection: Lady Pearl

Kouassi Norbert Akou

Age & Hometown: 25, Abidjan, Ivory Coast.

How he got his start: Akou attended Esmod Fashion School in Paris at 18, which is when his passion for fashion really took off.

What inspired the line: Inspired by the women of each ethnic group in Africa, every dress is named after a common woman from each African group to represent the women of that region. He dedicates his collection to those women who can't be on the runway. Akou's goal is to elevate them because "they are beautiful and deserve more respect than they're given."

SHAWN PUNCH

Favorite piece: "My favorite piece is the feathered dress."

Favorite fall trend: "I don't care so much about what I wear, but I love my bag. I have so many different bags."

Collection: Bandit

Anthony Rubio

Age & Hometown: "Let's just say I'm over 40," Rubio, who is from New York, says.

How he got his start: Rubio studied at the Fashion Institute of Technology and uses his know-how to design pet couture, and has been featured on the "Today Show."

Favorite piece: "I love the finale gown, which has thousands of Swarovski crystals and is set in three-dimensional silk with chiffon flowers. It's hand sewn onto a combination of five fabrics."

Favorite fall trend: "Rich colors in wools and tweeds trimmed in metallic leather or faux fur will be the trend."

YONI LEVI

Collection: Richard Fitz

Richard Fitz

Age & Hometown: 22, Johannesburg, South Africa.

How he got his start: Fitz recently received his fashion degree at Leaders in the Science of Fashion (LISOF) in Johannesburg and has been working in the fashion industry for three years now.

"I started after my brother and sister-in-law introduced me to fashion and gave me a style makeover," says Fitz. "Then I decided I wanted to be a designer."

Favorite Piece: "My favorite piece is the jacketdress. It's made of raw wool and was hand-felted to mold onto the body without any seams at all!"

COLLEEN GWEN ARMSTRONG

Favorite fall trend: "I think a big trend is moving away from figure-hugging forms and leaning more toward statement pieces that don't necessarily fit tightly or hug the body."

Giving love 'A Second Chance' onstage and in life

Brian and Diane Sutherland star in "A Second Chance," playing at the Public Theater through April 13. Tickets ($45) are available at www.publictheater.org. / JOAN MARCUS

Stage kiss. Life and art fall into step for one couple.

Husband and wife actors Diane and Brian Sutherland speak the way they sing onstage, with overlapping interjections and a genuine rapport. Indeed, the stars of "A Second Chance," at the Public Theater through April 13, are living the story of love found later in life in more ways than one.

Diane wasn't sure she'd get married — until she and Brian wed in their early 40s. Sutherland says that initially, walking down the aisle wasn't a huge deal to her, but as she got into her late 30s, it got tough. "I really wanted to share my life with somebody and it wasn't coming to me," she says.

She went on blind dates and set-ups and says she definitely would have had an online dating profile, had that been an option then. "I was trying to keep myself open to people beyond my sphere, and I did." But she had no luck — until she shared the stage with Brian in the 1997 Broadway revival of "1776." The rest, so to speak, is one for the Playbills.

Their current musical

Quoted

"It's all perspective. I thought 54 was practically in the grave, but it turns out it doesn't feel that way." Brian is based on details culled from the real life of the show's composer and lyricist, Ted Shen. In it, a widower meets and falls for a divorcee.

Though their late-blooming romance in real life is about a decade off from that of their real-life characters, the Sutherlands say their own circumstances still give them a way to approach the piece honestly. "We have the advantage of knowing each other so well. We have this rich history and rich relationship that is for free — we don't have to work at that," says Brian, with Diane chiming in to add that some occasional time apart doesn't hurt, either. They agree that some of the biggest truths they've taken from their experience onstage come from the story itself.

"Even though tragedy, sadness and grief comes into your life, it doesn't mean your life is over," Diane says of playing Jenna each night. She says she hopes audiences come away with the same kind of hope she had after meeting Brian. "There might be something good, better, different, wonderful around the corner. I want people to realize that you're never too late."

For Brian, coming to the role of an older man who has lost his wife has allowed some moments of reflection. "I thought I would have it all figured out by this age — nobody warned me about that," he says. The Sutherlands also agree that their search for answers onstage is a rare opportunity, especially in an industry obsessed with youth and image.

"A lot of our peers are experiencing this — single, married, whatever. We got here and we're still figuring it out," Diane says, hoping that the audience will applaud the idea of embracing uncertainty and take that with them after the curtain falls. The payoff, she says, is huge.

And she would know.

Welcome to the online

Login. Follow the flowchart to the online portal that suits you best.

Match.com, eHarmony and OKCupid

These are the OGs when it comes to online dating. The three sites require users to fill out lengthy questionnaires for their profiles and are geared toward people who are willing to put in time to either sift through or write (hopefully thoughtful) messages. The market is increasingly flooded with sites and apps that meet the needs of a short attention span. But if you're looking for a lifelong commitment, it just could be worth it.

Coffee Meets Bagel

Men will have plenty of options on this woman-heavy site: Sixty percent of users are female. This free site gives you just one match a day, usually a friend of a Facebook friend, which makes it a great option for busy people who don't have time to sift through profiles. The app targets educated millennials: One third of users have a college degree, 71 percent are in their 20s and 26 percent in their 30s. One drawback: If you don't live in Manhattan, you may not get as much love. Most of the members are based in Manhattan and overwhelmingly prefer users from Manhattan.

Another fun fact? Judaism is the most represented religion on Coffee Meets Bagel. Twenty-two percent of members identify as Jewish, followed closely by Christians at 21 percent.

dating jungle

Are You Interested?

The free dating site Are You Interested? has a game-like quality to it, in that you are presented with a list of members and you click "Yes" or "Skip" until you get bored. AYI has a wider spread in terms of age: In Manhattan, 35 percent of users are between 21 and 34, 26 percent of users are over 35 and 19 percent are between 35 and 49.

Tinder

This free location-based app lets users see photos of people nearby and swipe left for "nope" or swipe right for "like." If you both like each other, you can start chatting. Tinder will use Facebook to show you any mutual friends, but it does not exclusively show you friends of friends. The average Tinder user is between the ages of 18 and 24 in New York, and the male-to-female ratio is 55 to 45.

Hinge

Hinge lies somewhere between Coffee Meets Bagel and Tinder in concept. It gives users up to a dozen matches a day and chooses from friends of friends on Facebook. Young folks take note: Almost 80 percent of Hinge members are in their 20s.

Grouper

Grouper bills itself as a social club, not a dating service, but it's an easy way to meet members of the opposite sex while hanging out with two buddies. It sets you and two friends up on a blind meeting with three members of the opposite sex and costs $20 per person, which includes one round of drinks. It's good if you're unsure about online dating and want to meet people in a more casual setting.

Tawkify

Tawkify sets users up on a blind date (matchmakers choose someone they think is a fit) in which you can either talk on the phone, take a walk together or go on a mystery date. You can join for a pricey membership that includes extra special attention and other perks, or you can pay per date.

It's time to use your words, US

I am guessing that the United States is expected to intervene in every squabble going on around the globe, because it is a world power? Well, I looked around the world and found that the good U.S. is at war with many countries or has already finished a war with some countries but stayed there to maintain U.S. presence and the country's stability. I think we should try negotiations more, as wars cost us human lives, money and broken families — not to mention the fatherless-children created through wars. Enough is enough. I say we go green and desist from war at least for the next 30 years.

Why does the transponder have an off switch?

Day after day, we hear investigators tell us they don't know where or how 238 passengers and crew of flight MH370 vanished. I would like a simpler answer: Why is it possible to turn off the transponder, by accident, or with intent, in the first place? Why does a device has an on/off switch in the cockpit?

Report: Jets to meet with Vick

NFL. New York plans to talk to the veteran QB, who could push last year's rookie starter Geno Smith.

Geno Smith might have a very big name competing with him under center this season.

The Star-Ledger reports the Jets will be hosting free agent quarterback Michael Vick for a visit this Friday. A source tells Metro's Kristian Dyer he will be offered a chance to come in and compete for the starting role.

The Jets are in the market for a veteran QB to provide competition for Smith, who was a rookie second-round pick last season. Smith won the starting job when Mark Sanchez injured his shoulder in the team's third preseason game. He underwent surgery and missed the entire season.

Vick, meanwhile, spent most of last season on the bench in Philadelphia as Nick Foles ascended to a legitimate starter in the league. Vick battled hamstring injuries early in the season and when Foles threw seven touchdowns

Vick started just 16 games over the last two seasons due to injuries and ineffectiveness. He hasn't played more than 13 games in a season since returning to the NFL in 2009.

in Oakland in Week 9, the stage was set for the team's transition.

Vick, who will be 34 at the start of the 2014 season, started the first five games of 2013 before being injured against the Giants on Oct. 6. He returned to face the Giants three weeks later at home, but again aggravated the hamstring injury.

Jets re-sign guard Colon

It wasn't a splashy move, but the Jets continued an understated offseason on Wednesday by re-signing right guard Willie Colon for a second year with the team.

A team source tells us the deal is for one year. It is for a reported $2 million.

"I'm happy to be home," said Colon, a Bronx native who went to Hofstra. "I always wanted to be back with the Jets."

Colon started all 16 games for the Jets in 2013 after being signed as a free agent last offseason. Colon was especially invaluable in the locker room where his leadership and veteran presence was an important component of the team's surprising 8-8 season.

He said Wednesday both the Falcons and Vikings showed interest in signing him.

The Jets return four of five starters from last year's offensive line, with only Austin Howard lost via free agency. In his place, they signed Breno Giacomini who will play right tackle. KRISTIAN DYER

Pierce not concerned with playoff seeding

At media day, Paul Pierce said winning the Atlantic Division would not be cause for celebration.

It appears he is taking the same tact when commenting about where the Nets wind up seeded in the postseason.

"We haven't really said where we want to be [seeded]," Pierce said after practice a day before facing Charlotte. "We obviously want to win the division, but we know that even if we do start on the road, we're a more than capable team that can get the job

Jackson talks with team on first day

NBA. Head coach Mike Woodson spoke with his new boss and deflected worry about his job security.

the reins as president of the organization. He was gracious toward Woodson and his superstar Carmelo Anthony despite uncertain futures for both. Jackson indicated he would like Anthony to return even though he can opt out after the season.

He was complimentary of Woodson, though reports have indicated Jackson would like to bring in his own coach.

Owner James Dolan admitted he initially spoke with Jackson about being head coach of the Knicks.

"He has that right to talk to anyone about a coaching position," Woodson said Wednesday. "It happened obviously, but I'm the coach of the Knicks right now. I still have a job to do and as long as I'm coach of this team, I'm going to try to put my best foot forward in terms of trying to get this goal accomplished in terms of trying to get this team into the playoffs."

No word on whether Phil Jackson had to sit through an HR meeting on his first day on the job with the Knicks, but he did get a chance to meet with his new team — and beleaguered head coach.

"We spoke a little bit today," Mike Woodson told reporters pregame last night. "[He] came in and introduced himself to the coaches and we chatted a little bit."

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate*No. 1*Blues
(47-14-7)

The Ryan Miller trade seems to be working out quite well for the Blues, huh? Miller is 7-0-1 since he came to St. Louis with a .933 save percentage and 1.61 goals against average. The team won three more games this week and is now 24-of-26 on the penalty kill this month after not allowing one short-handed goal this week. This is the team to beat come playoff time.

No. 4*Ducks
(45-17-7)

It's not so much that the Ducks are playing poorly, they dropped because the teams in their lofty neighborhood have all been on tears.

No. 5*Penguins
(45-19-4)

Remember when they looked to be a lock for the top seed in the Eastern Conference? Not so much anymore as Boston has taken off.

No. 7*'Hawks
(39-15-15)

If you'd told us a few months ago Chicago would be seventh, we would've called you insane. Count them out at your own peril though.

No. 8*Canadiens
(38-25-7)

Montreal has won its last three games to take over second place in the Atlantic Division, though they are still a mile behind Boston.

No. 10*Wild
(36-23-10)

If they get in the playoffs, which looks like a good bet right now, the Wild are going to give some top team trouble in the first round.

No. 11*Lightning
(37-24-7)

Things are looking up in Tampa, Steven Stamkos has four points in his last three games and the Lightning has won three in a row.

No. 13*Leafs

Is there a more up-and-down team in the NHL than Toronto? Every week, they seem to be on a notable winning or losing streak.

No. 14*Rangers
(37-29-4)

Henrik Lundqvist became the winningest goaltender in team history Tuesday night (302) as the Rangers blitzed the Senators, 8-4.

No. 2*Bruins
(47-17-5)

It's not hard to figure out who the hottest team in the NHL is since Boston has won its last 10 games.

No. 3*Sharks
(45-18-7)

Finally, some movement in the NHL power rankings. Anaheim has stumbled and San Jose has taken advantage.

No. 6*Avalanche
(44-20-5)

The Avalanche are 7-3-0 in their last 10 games, but Colorado continues to play steady hockey. They host the Bruins on Friday.

No. 9*Kings
(38-25-6)

Despite what you'd expect from this forum, we're not making knee-jerk reactions. So we're not fretting over three straight losses.

No. 12*Flyers
(36-25-7)

The Flyers are playing well, capped off by a thrilling 3-2 overtime win over Chicago Tuesday thanks to Claude Giroux.

No. 15*Coyotes

CLIENT TESTIMONIALS:
 -Robert From Long Island: I own a restaurant and was having very serious money problems, I went to several psychics and they all told me that some body was doing black magic voodoo on my to ruin me, but nobody helped me. Mr. Shaman saw me and he told me to stop paying money to psychic, he told me that there was not voodoo on me and that I was fine, the real problem in my business was an employee stealing money from me, thanks Mr Shaman For your help.

-My husband was cheating on me and when I confronted him, he left me and run to the other woman, he humiliated me posting pictures with her and our kids on the internet, he rejected me for months, Mr. Shaman Brought him back in less than 5 days, thanks Mr. Shaman. Judith from Brooklyn.

-My name is Sandra, I'm Italian and I came to see Mr shaman all the way from long island because the sales in my business where dropping dramatically. Mr Shaman saw that my mother in law was doing witchcraft on me as revenge for leaving her son, who was an abusive man, thanks to Mr Shaman we where able to stop her, and my business is better than ever.

-Hello My daughter was in a very bad relationship this man made her a drug addict, he used to hit her in the face, but she refused to leave him, I went to Mr Shaman with my wife, he help us and my daughter left this guy after only 2 days.
